Let me be clear. This is no longer an issue of academic freedom and defending controversial scholarship. This is an issue of student safety, an issue of gaslighting and manipulation, an issue of bullying and cruelty.

If any UT Austin students are willing to share with Ian their concerns about TH, he is making himself available.

If any UT-Austin students want to share their stories but don't wish to do so publicly, I'm happy to talk to them and bring their concerns to the rest of the steering committee. My DM's, and email, are open.

Welcome to the field of Classics where it's controversial to say that someone who promotes pedophilic relationships, asked undergrads to talk about their rapes for a class assignment, and claims women are too biased to think critically about rape law should be afraid.

For my own mental health, I do not want to discuss this much in public fora. But I would be negligent in my role as a junior educator at UT if I did not defend my students. I fight for their protections and safety in the Graduate Student Assembly, and I will keep fighting.

I condemn the behavior of this professor (as well as the others in my institution) who jeopardize the safety of me, my students, others in my department (both passed and yet to come), and all other students at UT.

I have many other emotions. Disgust, rage, fear, anxiety. It is a lot to parse, and Twitter is not the place to do it. Suffice to say: I am 100% behind these extremely brave undergraduates who are risking themselves in a system stacked against them to put an end to this BS.

And, to be absolutely clear, I condemn ALL aspects of this behavior: rape apologism, pedophilia, abuse of undergrads, cruelty, gaslighting, misogyny, elitism, and every other form of nastiness involved.
